

Mr. Gregory R. Fleming is a native of Port Clinton, Ohio. Currently, he resides in Volcano, Hawai'i with his wife Lissa Shults. Before becoming a Department of the Army Civilian, Mr. Fleming joined the U.S. Army in 1979 and was commissioned as an Engineer Officer. He held a number of positions of increasing responsibility from Platoon through Department of the Army level before retiring in 2004. Mr. Fleming currently serves as the Deputy Garrison Commander, U.S. Army Garrison Pohakuloa and is responsible for the overall management of the civilian workforce and the Garrison's resources. Prior to this assignment, he served as the Executive Officer to the Director, Installation Management Command, Pacific Region.

Mr. Fleming is an engineer with degrees and professional relevant experience in both Civil and Environmental Engineering. His military assignments include 1st Armored Division, 1st Infantry Division, 25th Infantry Division, Baltimore District Corps of Engineers, Office Chief of Staff Army, Pentagon Renovation Office, 5th Army, US Army Pacific, US Military Academy, and Office of the Assistant Chief of Staff for Installation Management. Mr. Fleming's previous civilian assignment was at the Installation Management Command, Pacific Region, Fort Shafter, Hawai'i.

His civilian and military awards include the Commander's Award for Civilian Service, Meritorious Service Medal, the Army Commendation Medal, Army Achievement Medal and the Bronze De Fleury Medal. He has earned the Airborne Badge, Air Assault Badge and Canadian Airborne Badge. Mr. Fleming's Army education includes the Garrison Leader Course, Defense Senior Leader Development Course, Supervisor Development Course, Command and General Staff College, Combined Arms Senior Staff School, the Engineer Officer Advance and Basic Courses.